Gone

It didn't take long for wrecking crews to demolish the old C & EI train station Wednesday. The building — a landmark in Findlay — was believed to be over 90 years old. Word that the building was going to be demolished came on short notice when the Union Pacific Railroad notified the Village of Findlay that utility service would need to be disconnected by Wednesday.

Old Findlay rail depot torn down Tuesday

Another Findlay landmark is gone. Demolition crews leveled the Findlay railroad depot Wednesday, and by the evening the area has taken on a total new look.

While specific information about the old railroad depot, was unavailable, it is generally believed that the building was constructed in the early 1890s when the railroad first went through Findlay.

The railroad was built in 1890. At that time, Findlay had a post office, but the town was not incorporated.

After the railroad went through town, Findlay began to assume the proportions of a village, and soon the thought of incorporation was taken. A petition was circulated and in a short time the incorporation of Findlay was secured. In the course of a few days an election was called, officials were elected and the village of Findlay was incorporated in 1891.

When the railroad was built in 1890, it went through Findlay with a turn around. In 1891 the railroad was built to Pana for the St. Louis route. The railroad had two freight divisions, Salem and St. Louis.

According to research, the property on which the old station was built was deeded to the C & EI Railroad Co. Oct. 13, 1890 by Enoch Fritter and wife, Margaret. Another deed transaction from the Fritters and W.H. Mearns and wife, dated to the railroad took place April 8, 1891.

Ten years later in the Feb. 20, 1901 issue of the Enterprise, there was the following advertisement for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois R.R. "To Chicago: With the recent change of time the passenger service for Chicago, the North and Northwest via the Chicago and Eastern R.R. has been greatly improved. Two trains are in service. One daily except Sunday, a daylight train. The other every day, a night train. The night train has Reclining Chair Cars and Room Buffet Sleeping Car and following morning. This arrangement gives our patrons an unequalled service for all northern points. For rates, time tables and further information apply to any agent."

After a call to the owner of the property, the Oaten Pacific (which recently took over the Mteenrt-Pacific Mae) gleaned no information on the history of the old state, the information on the old rail line was researched by a local historian after Pauline Briney with assistance from Betty J. Coventry and Joan Lucas.

The area of town where the Findlay train depot was located is beginning to look empty. Recent remodeling by Livergood Grain Co. will add two grain elevators.

Former residents of the town if they come back for a visit

Later this year, when it first became known the railroad was planning to remove the old depot, there was some interest expressed in having the building moved and remodeled. However, no action was taken and before anything else was heard, the railroad had the building removed earlier this week.

Board learns utility costs have decreased

Utility costs for Findlay schools declined over $2,000 during the past three years, the Findlay School Board learned last week.

At a time when utility costs have been escalating, Findlay's decreased, in large part because of a reduction in the cost of the natural gas bill at the high school.

Unit superintendent Ron Hask presented figures on utility costs for the high school, grade school and bus garage at the board meeting last Wednesday.

Gas costs have increased, but electric costs have decreased. The board learned that sewer costs have varied during the three year period.

During the past school year, 1985-86, total utility costs were $10,124.52 for all four utilities. At the high school, the breakdown was: $14,000.00, electric; $2,100.00, gas; $200.00, water; $1,100.00, sewer. At the grade school, $1,100.00, electric; $4,000.00, gas; $100.00, water; $100.00, sewer. At the bus garage, $100.00, electric; $100.00, gas; $100.00, water.

Total utility costs for the previous school year, 1984-85 were $1,000 higher. The breakdown at the high school, $13,000.00, electric; $14,000.00, gas; $200.00, water; $1,200.00, sewer. At the grade school, $2,000.00, electric; $4,000.00, gas; $100.00, water; $100.00, sewer. At the bus garage, $100.00, electric; $200.00, gas; $100.00, water.

In the third year of figures presented by Hask, 1983-84, the breakdown was: at the high school, $12,000.00, electric; $2,000.00, gas; $200.00, water; $1,200.00, sewer. At the grade school, $1,100.00, electric; $4,000.00, gas; $100.00, water; $100.00, sewer. At the bus garage, $100.00, electric; $100.00, gas; $100.00, water.

Once again, the board tabled a request by Findlay FFA adviser Brian Wood to purchase a tractor for the FFA program. Before they approve the purchase, the board asked Wood to check on insurance and equipment to use with the tractor.

Wood approached the board last month about purchasing a 3000 tractor at a cost of $2,700. At the time, some board members expressed reluctance at the purchase. In the past, FFA students borrowed equipment from area farmers.

Approximately 35 students were involved in the Findlay FFA program during the past school year. There were an additional 20 students enrolled in agriculture classes with a slight increase expected in the coming school year.

In other action, the board learned that registration for the 1986-87 school year will be Tuesday, Aug. 12. The first day of school will be Aug.

EDITOR'S NOTE: In searching for information on the railroad depot, associate editor Pauline Briney, with assistance from Betty Coventry and Jean Lucas, discovered several interesting articles about the village which appeared in the Findlay Enterprise Feb. 23, 1981.

These are some of the articles:

Fine school system

Few villages of its size in the state have a better school system than does the Village of Findlay. From the earliest settlement of this community the citizens have taken a freely interart in educational affairs, and this interest today finds expression in educational equipment that any village in the land might be proud of.

The presort brick atfnctare was brill in 1MB. This handsome school brfuvuag la astretion of the rapidly and thoroughness of modern progress. Findlay has grown, and her requirements along educational Unes have kept pace with her growth. These requirements have been catered to oy a puwuc spiraea, patriotic and enlightansdcttiMnhip.

The faculty consists of four teachers who are feeding the material growth and development of 140 of the rising generation, guiding their feet in the pathway that leads to the goal of useful manhood, womanhood and good dtisnship. The roster is as follows: E.C. Graybill, principal; fee Fayette KnNL grammar; Miss Muy Shanks. Intermediate; and Miss Rena Caverder, primary.

He brought to these schools just what was needed to set in motion idle wheels. no шк аувангго M every phwledge that the state grants to live scholars, which has resulted in an enviates school system, and one to which every resident of the village may point with pride.

The school was regraded last September by E.C. Graybill, and many changes made that work well. The High School course was put in shape to be placed on the accredited list of a number of colleges in the state. This gives permanence and value to the diploma which will be given next year to from six to nine graduates.

The High School course in mathematics leads through higher arithmetic, algebra, plane and solid geometry to trigonometry; the plates the course with themes. The Bookkeeping is taught four months in the junior year's work. Choice of one or two year's Latin is given to each class graduating. A special course of four months is given in physiology in the lognschool course, The history work in the high school consists of one year of United State htetesy feHewoddy ancient medieval and modern peoples.

Findlay has eight months school each ear. A nsmbor of tuition pupfla attended this year. Two of the high school pupils, W. Shanks and Ada McVay are already holdtag car-tificatoo to teach.

Famfflos with chfiteen of school age to whom they desire to give every educational advantage find the Findlay school is far better adopted to their requirements than the average. We are proud of our schools.

The first telephone

The first telephone service in Findlay was in a grocery store. To call out of town or to receive a call, the message from the caller was given to the operator who relayed it to the person being called.

A list of numbers was printed in the enterprise because with only lf telephones, there was no telephone book.

Those having telephone numbers were: Gould Bros. & Co., EA. Centos Office, S.B. Melcher residence, Merchant & Farmers Bank, Will Melchor rated ence, James Dazey residence» Dr. Askins office, Davis Bros. Livery Barn, Central Hotel, N.F. Keim store, Stampf & Earp store, G.M. Dickson Store, Enterprise Office, Frank Brown residence, W.B. Wallace residence and GM Dickson residence.

In a news item on the same date: William Melcher ordered goods from Springfield, Ohio Monday by telephone. The conversation that passed between them was plain and distinct showing that the phones are in good shape.

Queen of the Prairie

Findlay has been justly termed the queen of Prairie villages. The deep, rich, black soil surrounding furnishes ample foundation for the permuibT and continued prosperity. It is the natural centre of one of the most prolific corn producing regions in the grand old State of Illinois, which nature has graciously endowed with a wealth of advantages that make it a most dortretasspotferathrivtagteWiaem and manufacturing centre.

Around the county

by Edward N. Ballard
Farm Advisor, Shelby County

With the harvest period coming to an end it means lots of corn will be going under a long term storage program. Remember a few important points when considering the movement of this corn, continued storage under three-year reserve, and the storage of the 1986 crop.

Good sanitation is a must if we plan to keep new corn as well as old corn. If the 1985 corn is to remain in storage, move and consolidate this old corn so that whenever possible 1986 corn can be placed into empty bins. Storing new grain on top of old grain exposes the new crop to insect infestation that is already established. Clean all grain from bins by scooping and sweeping, and spray the walls and floors of empty bins with malathion, methoxychlor, or Roldan before storing the 1986 crop. Application rates for these products are listed on the label.

Preparation is needed for long-term storage, three-year reserve. Special management practices are necessary for successful long-term storage without excessive damage to grain. Practices that are adequate for maintaining grain quality from fall harvest until spring sale often are inadequate for continued storage through summer or for as long as three years. To maintain the quality of stored corn a three-year reserve, dry the corn to a moisture content of 12 to 14 percent. Corn must be stored safely through one or more summers at 15.5 percent moisture. At the beginning of the long-term storage period, move the corn to an empty bin. Moving the corn makes it possible to clean it, remove fine materials, and apply protectant insecticides. Always move the corn to an empty bin that has been sprayed with malathion, methoxychlor or Roldan. Clean the grata to reduce levels of fine materials. A rotary cleaner does a better job than a screen or perforated section of an auger.

As corn is moved into the bin, treat all of it at the same time with malathion. Malathion will protect the corn, dried to 12 percent moisture, from all pests except Indian meal moth for more than one year. Treat the surface of the grata nest April or May by rotating the Bacillus thuringiensis, which sells by several trade names, to control Indian meal moth.

The University of Illinois Extension entomologists is working on a long term research project on the effectiveness of long term storage grain. To do this work, they will need to treat corn going into 16 different bins, or flat storage, and are looking for cooperators to work on this project.

If you have 1985 corn going into three-year storage reserve program and would be interested in working with the University of Illinois entomology department, contact the Shelby County Cooperative Extension office for more details.

Grain Storage Meeting

With the increasing number of questions in regard to grain storage this fall the Agriculture Extension Council has scheduled an informational meeting to be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 5 at the 4-H Center in Shelbyville.

Warren Gostech, University of Illinois agricultural engineer, will be present to discuss the outlook for the grain storage situation this fall. He'll be looking at the different types of drying of storage systems as well as different types of temporary grain storage. This should be a very informative meeting, and Gostech will be available to answer questions or will be available for on the farm assistance in helping design grain storage or temporary grain storage.

Conservation Tillage Tour

The annual Shelby County Conservation Tillage tour has been scheduled for Wednesday, Aug. 6. The tour is sponsored by the Shelby County Soil and Water Conservation District Board and the Shelby County Extension Service.

The tour will start at 12:45 p.m. at the Cooperative Extension office or at the Jerrold McKittrick farm in Clarksville Township at 1 p.m.

There has been an increased interest in reducing fertilizer costs by going back to row type applications, and the first two stops will teach you two different methods of row applications of fertilizer.

Jerrold McKittrick row fertilized all his corn and soybeans this spring with the Yetter band row applicator. The Yetter fertilizer system was placed on the front of the planter where he applied liquid fertilizer at planting time. For his tillage systems the fields were soil saved last fall, and then this spring disked and field cultivated and then planted. The second stop will be on the Charles Gritzmacher farm in Shelbyville Township where Charley has rigged up his own homemade row fertilizer applicator. Charley followed the MUM type of fitting program max jerron te or x made Ne sen row tafflar ep-Ucstor.

The third farm to be visited on the tour will be the Bob Conine farm at Tower Hill Towne No. 1. Bob has gone to row till system of tillage. At this stop we will also have Bob Boehle, agronomist and soil consultant, present to talk about soil compaction. We will be digging a hole at this farm and comparing the compaction of the row-till versus other types of tillage systems.

More details on the Conservation Tillage Tour will be announced in the near future.

Scholarship is available

Applications are now being accepted by the Trust Department, First Trust Bank of Shelbyville, for a scholarship to be awarded in August as a result of a trust fund established under the Last Will and Testament of Kenneth Diehl.

The trust specifies that annually scholarship funds will be provided to a college student majoring in agriculture, a resident of Shelby County, Illinois, and having successfully completed two years of college. It further provides for a committee consisting of the Superintendent of Schools of Shelbyville school district, Shelby County Extension Advisor and Trust Officers of the First Trust Bank of Shelbyville to determine the recipient of the annual scholarship award. The amount of the scholarship, amounting to $1,400 for 1986, is derived from the annual income from the trust fund.

Students interested in applying for this year's Kenneth Diehl Scholarship award should contact Bob Pancoast or Don Behl at First Trust Bank of Shelbyville. Applicants must be a graduate of a Shelby County high school, successfully having completed two years of college, majoring in agriculture, and must be academically in good standing with financial need and good character. Applications are due by Aug. 12.

Construction work is proceeding along at the Livergood Grain Co. on facilities to additional grain storage. A bumper crop is expected, and storage is being increased at the elevator for the crop.
